Money has many ironies, and here is an important one: wealth is what you do not see. On spotting a Ferrari driving around, (6) _____. In reality, however, many drivers of expensive cars turn out to be only mediocre successes who spend a huge percentage of their paycheck on a vehicle. Someone driving a hundred-thousand-dollar car might indeed be wealthy. Yet the only firm data point you have about their wealth is that they have a hundred thousand dollars less than they did before they bought the car or a hundred thousand dollars more in debt. (7) _____.

We tend to judge wealth by what we see (8) _____. We cannot peer into people's bank accounts or brokerage statements, so we rely on outward appearances to gauge financial success: cars, houses, photographs on social media. Modern capitalism has turned helping people fake it until they make it into a cherished industry, (9) _____. Wealth hides in the nice car not purchased, the diamonds left in the shop and the first-class upgrade declined. Wealth is the financial assets that have not yet been converted into the stuff you see.

Hence, we should be careful (10) _____. It is more than mere semantics; not knowing the difference is the source of countless poor money decisions.

- Question 6. A. people might assume you must be the rich owner of the car
B. you might be assumed to be the rich owner of the car
C. the car might be assumed to be owned by a rich person
D. you might assume that the owner of the car must be rich
- Question 7. A. What you know is about them all
B. You know what they are all about
C. That is all you know about them
D. All that you know is about them
- Question 8. A. other than external clues as the information that we only have to work with
B. unless we only have external clues as the information to work with
C. because external clues are the only information we have to work with
D. rather than by external clues as the only information we have to work with
- Question 9. A. Likewise, the truth is that the existence of authentic wealth remains a secret
B. Authentic wealth, as a consequence, secretly exists by remaining truthful
C. However, the truth remains that authentic wealth keeps its existence a secret
D. Authentic wealth, similarly, keeps its existence by secretly remaining truthful
- Question 10. A. being wealthy is distinguishing itself from being rich
B. to distinguish between being wealthy and being rich
C. being wealthy and being rich distinguish themselves
D. for being wealthy to be distinguished from being rich

Read the passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 23 to 32.

Environmental services, even when they arise without any human labour, are by no means cost-free. Every cost should be understood in terms of opportunity cost. For environmental services, the opportunity cost amounts to the net gain relinquished because the resources are no longer available for their second-best application. Whenever a resource has alternative uses, it cannot legitimately be deemed free.

For instance, a section of river might serve as a site used for either white-water canoeing or hydroelectric generation. Constructing a dam to produce electricity would flood the rapids, so this makes white-water canoeing here out of the question. The opportunity cost of preserving the river for canoeing equals the net benefit of the electricity that would otherwise have been produced, once the expenses of generation and distribution have been subtracted. By the same token, the opportunity cost of erecting the dam involves everything the river in its natural state would have provided – leisure activities, wildlife, scenic beauty, and whatever worth future generations might attach to experiencing the rapids.

This understanding carries considerable weight for planning development. [I] Numerous decisions initially appearing to be cost-free moves in favour of growth prove, when examined carefully, to be against something else. [II] Clearing a forest to make way for crops is hardly without cost; it is paid for through losses in carbon storage, biological diversity, and all the functions the forest once performed unnoticed. [III] Channelling a river for irrigation has its price – namely, whatever the river was doing before its course was altered. [IV] Even leaving a swathe of land alone exacts a cost, since the earnings that intensive exploitation might have produced are equally sacrificed.

From this perspective, economic development can never be reduced to whether a project delivers a positive return. Rather, what must be asked is whether that return outweighs the value of sacrifices. Policies considering this – by pricing scarce environmental services, or obliging those in charge to consider both sides – are not against development. What they demand is that development should be worth its true cost. The danger lies not in counting too much, but in counting too little.

Question 23. The word relinquished in paragraph 1 is closest in meaning to _____.
A. given up B. filled up C. ended up D. made up

Question 24. According to paragraph 1, the costs of environmental services are _____.
A. included in the market value of natural resources
B. determined by financial investment in natural resources
C. minimal because these services are nearly labour-free
D. existent even in the absence of human involvement

Question 25. Which of the following is NOT implied in paragraph 2?
A. The intrinsic value of the river is not confined to generating hydroelectricity only.
B. Intangible benefits also constitute the opportunity cost of the dam construction.
C. The strains on the ecosystem of the river imposed by recreational activities and power generation are similar.
D. It is impossible to exploit one stretch of river for both hydroelectric generation and white-water canoeing.

Question 26. Where in paragraph 3 does the following sentence best fit?
Such hidden costs only come to light when one stops to think about the roles nature itself is quietly playing.
A. [II] B. [I] C. [IV] D. [III]

Question 27. Which of the following best summarises paragraph 3?
A. Apparently harmless developments actually come at an underlying price.
B. Untouched and cultivated lands both produce benefits in the long term.
C. Economic benefits should never take precedence over forest and river preservation.
D. Ecological preservation exerts negligible influence on economic development.

Question 28. The word they in paragraph 4 refers to _____.
A. services B. sacrifices C. sides D. policies

Question 29. What conclusion can be drawn from paragraph 4?
A. Due consideration for opportunity costs is crucial for the genuine success of development.
B. Both excessive caution and complete ignorance regarding environmental costs cause permanent damage.
C. Putting a price on environmental services is aimed at slowing down economic projects.
D. Initiatives are required by law to deduct the hidden costs before claiming to have a positive return.

Question 30. Which of the following is true according to the passage?
A. Keeping land intact is free of opportunity cost as there is no resource consumption.
B. The positive return of every economic development must be worth what is sacrificed.
C. Assigning a specific price tag to a resource is a prerequisite for calculating opportunity costs.
D. Cost-free resources can be put to alternative uses as long as this is legally permitted.

Question 31. Which of the following can be inferred from the passage?
A. Projects are mandated to make up for the economic losses in return for environmental preservation.
B. The scale of economic development inevitably suffers from strict regulations on environmental services.
C. The value of preserved environmental services far outweighs the benefits of industrial development.
D. Decisions that overlook environmental opportunity costs risk overestimating the net gains they produce.

- Question 32. Which of the following would be the best title for the passage?
- A. Natural Preservation: Littering in a New Era
B. Environment: A Tower of Strength
C. Development: Factoring in Sacrifice
D. Sustainable Development: A Pipe Dream

Read the passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 33 to 40.

For most undergraduates today, opening a laptop at the start of a lecture has become as automatic as sitting down. The device is no longer a tool consciously chosen; it is simply there, blinking softly, ready to absorb every word that the instructor utters. Not researchers who study students' attention argue that this convenience comes at a price most learners are unaware that they are paying.

A recent multi-campus study tracked the in-class behaviour of nearly two thousand undergraduates across humanities and science courses. Even when students claimed to be "fully focused," eye-tracking data showed that they shifted between unrelated tabs an average of fourteen times per fifty-minute session. The students themselves were astounded when they were shown the results. Many had believed that they were absorbing every point made in class.

The findings underline an unsettling truth: digital multitasking is not just inefficient; it is invisible to those engaged in it. Cognitive scientists describe this as "the illusion of competence" – the false sense that because information has passed beneath one's eyes, it has been understood and stored. Tests administered a week after the lectures consistently revealed otherwise, with laptop-using students recalling roughly a third less than those taking handwritten notes.

Things go from bad to worse when we take into account the fact that the very tools that distract students are also genuinely essential for some forms of academic work. Annotating digital texts, accessing research databases and recording lectures all benefit from screen-based learning. The crucial question for tertiary institutions, then, is not to get rid of devices altogether but to teach students when and how to set them aside. Until that skill is cultivated, the lecture hall may continue to function less as a place of collective inquiry and more as a quiet place of solitary screens.

Question 33. In paragraph 1, the writer is _____.

- A. contrasting different methods of notetaking
B. warning against a common habit among students
C. arguing in favour of undergraduates' use of laptops
D. questioning the real worth of costly laptops

Question 34. The word tracked in paragraph 2 is closest in meaning to _____.

- A. controlled
B. copied
C. represented
D. examined

Question 35. The word astounded in paragraph 2 is OPPOSITE in meaning to _____.

- A. anxious
B. calm
C. brave
D. honest

Question 36. The word those in paragraph 3 refers to _____.

- A. scientists
B. lectures
C. students
D. tests

Question 37. Which of the following best paraphrases the underlined sentence in paragraph 4?

- A. What complicates matters is that digital devices necessary for completing some university work can interfere with students' concentration.
B. It is the digital devices used for certain complicated academic tasks at university that are distracting students from more important assignments.
C. Some academic work at university requires students' genuine concentration, which has become a complicated matter with bad-quality digital tools.
D. Not only certain academic assignments at university but also the digital tools useful for these tasks are causing complicated problems for students.

Question 38. Which of the following statements would the writer NOT agree with?

- A. Those switching between tasks on digital devices are aware of its adverse impacts on productivity.
B. Students have become more isolated in lecture halls because of the widespread use of laptops.
C. Providing students with guidance for proper use of laptops is better than imposing a blanket ban.
D. University students' use of laptops in classrooms has become a practice performed unconsciously.

Question 39. In which paragraph does the writer mention a mismatch between self-report and scientific findings?

- A. Paragraph 3
B. Paragraph 1
C. Paragraph 4
D. Paragraph 2

Question 40. In which paragraph does the writer provide examples for a general term?

- A. Paragraph 2
B. Paragraph 3
C. Paragraph 1
D. Paragraph 4
